

Government of South Australia
Department of Human Services

Child safe environments

Principles of Good Practice

Issued by the Chief Executive, Department of Human Services

(Section 145(a), Children and Young People (Safety) Act 2017 (SA))

Version: July 2012 (Updated 2019)

Acknowledgements

The Department of Human Services would like to thank the following organisations for participating in the initial consultation:

- Association of Independent Schools of South Australia
- Association of Professional Engineers, Scientists and Managers, Australia
- Attorney-General's Department
- Australian Liquor, Hospitality and Miscellaneous Workers' Union
- Australian Nursing Federation
- Catholic Archdiocesan
- Catholic Education SA
- Department for Education
- Department for Innovation and Skills (formerly the Department of Further Education Employment, Employment, Science and Technology)
- SA Health
- Local Government Association of South Australia
- Office for Recreation & Sport
- Office for Volunteers
- Public Service Association
- South Australia Police
- South Australian Salaried Medical Officers Association
- Teachers Registration Board of South Australia

Contents

Acknowledgements	2
Introduction	4
Child safe environments	5
Legislation.....	7
Ensuring child safe environments: appropriate policies and procedures	9
Applying the Principles of good practice	13
Principle 1: Identify and analyse risk of harm	14
Principle 2: Develop a clear and accessible child safe policy	16
Principle 3: Develop codes of conduct for adults and children	18
Principle 4: Choose suitable employees and volunteers	21
Principle 5: Support, train, supervise and enhance performance	25
Principle 6: Empower and promote the participation of children in decision-making and service development	27
Principle 7: Report and respond appropriately to suspicions a child or young person is at risk	29
Glossary of terms	33

Introduction

Every child and young person¹ has a right to be safe from harm at all times. The wellbeing and best interests of children and young people are the responsibility of the entire community. As members of the wider community, we must act to ensure that every environment where children and young people are present is safe.

Child protection legislation in South Australia aims to ensure that all children are safe from harm and are cared for in a way that allows them to reach their full potential. Both the Children and Young People (Safety) Act 2017 (Safety Act) and the Child Safety (Prohibited Persons) Act 2016 (Prohibited Persons Act) contain obligations for people who work or volunteer with children. This legislation also places particular responsibilities on the Chief Executive, Department of Human Services, state authorities, and prescribed organisations with respect to ensuring child safe environments.

Under section 145 of the Safety Act, the Chief Executive, Department of Human Services is responsible for:

- developing codes of conduct and Principles of good practice for caring for, or working with, children and young people (section 145(a))
- providing guidance on matters relating to the protection of children and young people (section 145(b))
- sharing information about ways in which children and young people may be at risk of harm so that such cases are more readily recognised and more promptly dealt with (section 145(d)).

The Chief Executive is also responsible for monitoring progress towards child safe environments in the government and non-government sectors and reporting regularly to the Minister for Child Protection on that subject.

Under Chapter 8 of the Safety Act, state authorities and prescribed organisations that provide services or undertake activities that are child-related work are required to have in place appropriate policies and procedures to ensure child safe environments. These policies and procedures must comply with standards and principles issued from time to time by the Chief Executive in accordance with section 145.

Organisations must also lodge a Child safe environments compliance statement that demonstrates that they meet the requirements to ensure child safe environments with the Department of Human Services.

These Principles of good practice have been issued pursuant to Section 145 (a) of the Safety Act. They are part of an integrated package² of measures aimed at establishing and maintaining child safe environments and ensuring that the safety and wellbeing of children remains of paramount consideration for all organisations that provide services for children.

¹ Child and young person means a person under 18 years of age.

² This document, the Principles of good practice, issued by the Chief Executive, Department of Human Services, sets out the minimum requirements relating to child safe environments. See also: <https://dhs.sa.gov.au/home>.

Child safe environments

A child safe organisation:

- ‘takes a preventative, proactive and participatory stance on child protection issues’,³ where the safety and wellbeing of children is the paramount consideration when developing activities, policies and management practices
- is one that values and embraces the opinions and views of children
- encourages and assists children to build skills that will assist them to participate in society
- takes action to protect children from physical, sexual, emotional and psychological abuse and neglect.

Creating child safe environments is a dynamic process that involves active participation and responsibility by all sectors of the community including individuals, families, state authorities and non-government organisations and community groups. Sharing responsibility for the care and protection of children and young people helps to develop a stronger, more child-focused community. A child safe community can:

- care for all children and young people
- identify vulnerable children and young people
- support children and young people who have suffered harm or have been placed at risk
- prevent further harm to children and young people.

The focus of a child safe organisation is not simply to create an environment that minimises risk or danger. It is about building environments which are both child-safe and child-friendly, where children and young people feel respected, valued and encouraged to reach their full potential.

Child safe environments are the product of a range of strategies and initiatives. In addition to developing child safe policies, procedures and appropriate codes of conduct for employees, volunteers and members, organisations must also foster cultures of openness. This means:

- children and young people need to know what to do if they believe they have been subject to inappropriate behaviour, have been placed at risk or have experienced harm (including but not limited to harm caused by sexual, physical, mental or emotional abuse or neglect)
- organisations need to have very clear procedures to assist employees/volunteers in identifying children and young people suspected to be at risk

³ Child Wise (2004), Choose with Care: A handbook to build safer organisations for children, Child Wise, Melbourne, pg 18.

- management, employees and volunteers must also be aware of their duty to report a suspicion that a child or young person is at risk to the Child Abuse Report Line (13 14 78) and to take other measures to establish, promote and ensure child safe and child friendly environments

This commitment to protecting and supporting children should be embedded in an organisation's culture with everyone being aware of their responsibilities.

General principles

The principles and philosophy that underpin child protection work within Australia are based on the United Nations Convention on the Rights on the Child.⁴ The convention provides the foundations of these Principles of good practice and emphasises that:

- all children have equal rights to protection from abuse and neglect
- all children should be encouraged to fulfil their potential and inequalities should be challenged
- all children should be encouraged to participate fully in a cultural and artistic life and appropriate and equal opportunities should be provided for cultural, artistic, recreational and leisure activity
- everybody has a responsibility to support the care and protection of children
- organisations shall take all appropriate legislative, administrative, social and educational measures to protect children from all forms of abuse, neglect or negligent treatment, while in their care
- organisations have a duty of care to children with whom they work and with whom their agents, contractors and subcontractors work
- if organisations work through partners (such as contractors, subcontractors or agents), they have a responsibility to meet minimum standards of protection for the children in their partners' programs.

The National Framework for Creating Child Safe Environments has been endorsed by all Australian jurisdictions and outlines that organisations have a moral and legal responsibility to ensure that children in their care are safe. Community service organisations have additional obligations because of the particular vulnerability of many children and young people in their care or utilising their services.⁵

⁴ United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights Convention on the Rights of the Child: Adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession by General Assembly resolution 44/25 of 20 November 1989, entry into force 2 September 1990, in accordance with article 49. At: <https://www.ohchr.org/en/professionalinterest/pages/crc.aspx>.

⁵ Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2005), National Framework for Creating Child Safe Environments Schedule: An Evidence-based Guide for Risk Assessment and Decision-making when Undertaking Background Checking, pg 3.

These Principles of good practice reflect the rationale of the National Framework Schedule: An Evidence-based Guide for Risk Assessment and Decision-making when Undertaking Background Checking,⁶ which emphasises that:

- the paramount consideration is the rights, interests and wellbeing of children and their protection from harm
- the organisation has a duty of care to take all reasonable, necessary and appropriate steps to protect children and young people from risk of harm while they are under the care or supervision of that organisation's employees or volunteers.

The National Framework for Creating Child Safe Environments is available from <https://www.education.sa.gov.au/doc/creating-safe-environments-children-national-framework>.

Legislation

These Principles of good practice have been developed in accordance with the requirements of the Safety Act, in particular section 145 and Chapter 8. These principles also refer to the working with children check obligations set out in the Prohibited Persons Act. Under these Acts, prescribed organisations that provide services or undertake activities that are child-related work must, as soon as practicable following the formation of the organisation, establish appropriate policies and procedures for ensuring:

- that appropriate reports about children and young people suspected to be at risk are made by mandated notifiers
- that child safe environments are established and maintained in respect of the services or activities provided by the organisation.

These organisations must also lodge a 'Child safe environments compliance statement' setting out their policies and procedures.

Prescribed organisations

The Safety Act requires all 'prescribed organisations' as defined in section 114(7) to ensure child safe environments. Current prescribed organisations are:

- state authorities (as defined in section 16 of the Safety Act)
- persons or bodies who provide a service or undertake an activity that constitutes child-related work under the Prohibited Persons Act, including:
 - accommodation and residential services for children
 - services or activities provided by religious organisations (which includes organisations providing spiritual or pastoral services)
 - childcare or child-minding services
 - child protection services
 - services or activities provided in the course of the operation of clubs and associations with a significant membership of, or involvement by, children,

⁶ Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2005), pg 2.

including clubs and associations providing services or activities of a sporting, recreational, cultural or artistic nature

- coaching or tuition services for children
- commercial services provided directly to children, including:
 - the sale or supply of goods or services where physical contact with children would reasonably be expected to occur
 - recreational services where contact with children would be reasonably expected to occur (such as a play gym)
 - entertainment services provided at children's parties or events (such as face painting or the hire of bouncing castles)
 - entertainment services where a person appears or performs as a costumed character that is likely to appeal to children (such as a sports mascot or Santa Clause)
 - photography of children
 - competitions held primarily for children, or where there is a children's category (such as beauty pageants and talent shows)
- disability services for children
- education services for children (including preschool, primary and secondary education, but not tertiary education)
- health services for children (including allied health services)
- justice and detention services for children
- transport services for children
- the provision of traffic control at, or other supervision of, school pedestrian crossings
- other persons or bodies declared in the regulations which include:
 - non-government organisations that provide welfare or cultural services wholly or partly for children.⁷

For up-to-date information on the types of organisations and service providers who are required to provide child safe environments visit the department's website, <https://dhs.sa.gov.au/home>.

⁷ See regulation 35 (2)(a-c), Children and Young People (Safety) Regulations 2017 and Section 8C(4)(b) Children's Protection Act 1993.

Ensuring child safe environments: appropriate policies and procedures

Prescribed organisations are required by law to develop appropriate policies and procedures for ensuring child safe environments. These organisations are obliged, under the Children and Young People (Safety) Regulations 2017 (Safety Regulations), to ensure that their policies and procedures comply with codes of conduct and Principles of good practice of a kind developed in accordance with section 145(a) of the Safety Act.

Pursuant to Section 114(3) of the Safety Act, prescribed organisations are also required to lodge a child safe environments compliance statement that sets out their child safe environments policies and procedures.

Organisations that do not ensure child safe environments or fail to lodge a child safe environments compliance statement may face fines of up to $10 000 (see section 114(6)).

More information about establishing child safe environments, including an online lodgement form for submitting a Child safe environment compliance statement, is available from the Department of Human Services website <https://dhs.sa.gov.au/home>.

Organisations may wish to monitor their progress towards ensuring child safe environments. To check the overall progress of an organisation, a number of indicators might be used. For example, an organisation may measure:

- children's self-reported level of perceived safety through a purpose-designed questionnaire
- employees' and volunteers' understanding of the child safe policy, related procedures and code of conduct
- employees' and volunteers' awareness of reporting and response procedures when dealing with children and young people suspected to be at risk
- written records of the advice and support provided to children, parents, employees and volunteers (where applicable).

Another measure of an organisation's commitment towards ensuring child safe environments is its approach to the sharing of information where that is necessary to protect and promote the wellbeing of children. The Information Sharing Guidelines for Promoting Safety and Wellbeing⁸ provide a mechanism for sharing information when it is believed that a person is at risk of harm, and require that relevant government and state government funded organisations develop an appendix that outlines how the organisation will ensure that information is appropriately shared to promote child safety and wellbeing.

Ensuring child safe environments within an organisation requires ongoing commitment. Throughout this document there are indicators of compliance which may be used as a measure of an organisation's efforts towards building child safe environments.

⁸ The Guidelines are available at <https://www.education.sa.gov.au/supporting-students/child-protection/information-sharing-guidelines>.

Mandated notification and reporting children and young people suspected to be at risk

Anyone who suspects, on reasonable grounds, that a child or young person is, or may be at risk, should report this suspicion to the Child Abuse Report Line (ph. 13 14 78).

Under Chapter 5 of the Safety Act, certain groups of people are required to make a report to the Department for Child Protection if they suspect on reasonable grounds that a child is, or may be at risk and this suspicion is formed in the course of their work. This is a legal obligation which carries a penalty if the individual fails to comply. These people are referred to as mandated notifiers.

Children and young people at risk

Section 18 of the Safety Act states that a child or young person is 'at risk' if:

- they have suffered harm, or there is a likelihood that they will suffer harm, being harm of a kind against which ordinarily they should have been protected
- there is a likelihood they will be removed from the State for the purpose:
 - of a medical procedure that would be unlawful in South Australia (including female genital mutilation)
 - taking part in a marriage that would be void or invalid under the Marriage Act 1961 (Cth)
 - taking part in an activity that would be illegal in South Australia
- their parent or guardians are unable or unwilling to care for them, have abandoned them, cannot be found or are dead
- they are of compulsory school age but are persistently absent from school without explanation
- they are homeless or of no fixed address.

Meaning of harm

Section 17 of the Safety Act defines 'harm' to mean physical or psychological harm (whether caused by an act or omission), including harm caused by sexual, physical, mental or emotional abuse or neglect.

Reasonable grounds to form a suspicion that a child or young person may be at risk may include:

- when a child tells you they are at risk or have been harmed
- when your own observations of a particular child's behaviour and/or injuries lead you to suspect they are at risk or harm is occurring
- when a child tells you that they know of someone who is at risk or has been harmed (they may possibly be referring to themselves)
- when you hear about a child at risk from someone who is in a position to provide reliable information, such as a relative, friend, neighbour or sibling of the child.

Mandated notifiers

The following groups of people are required to report a suspicion that a child is or may be at risk (mandated notifiers):

- medical practitioners
- pharmacists
- registered or enrolled nurses
- dentists
- psychologists
- police officers
- community corrections officers
- social workers
- ministers of religion
- employees or volunteers of organisations formed for religious or spiritual purposes
- teachers employed to teach in a school, preschool or kindergarten
- employees of, or volunteers in, an organisation that provides health, welfare, education, sporting or recreational, child care or residential services wholly or partly for children and young people, being persons who:
 - provide such services directly to children and young people; or
 - hold a management position in the organisation, the duties of which include direct responsibility for, or direct supervision of, the provision of those services to children and young people
- an officer or employee of a prescribed organisation (as per section 114 of the Safety Act) who holds a management position in the organisation, the duties of which include direct responsibility for, or direct supervision of, the provision of services to children.

Keeping children and young people safe involves more than just reporting concerns to the Department for Child Protection or responding to an allegation of risk once it has been made. Promoting a whole of community responsibility for the care and protection of children and young people helps to challenge the unrealistic expectation that the Department for Child Protection alone can effectively respond to all child protection concerns.

The Safety Act in section 30(2) states that compliance with a duty to notify in accordance with the Act does not necessarily exhaust a duty of care that may be owed to a child or young person by a mandated notifier.

See Child safe environments: Guidelines for mandated notifiers and information for organisations available online at <https://dhs.sa.gov.au/home>.

Meeting the working with children check requirements

A key part of providing child safe environments is to ensure that people who will be working with children or undertaking child-related work have undergone a comprehensive screening and suitability assessment prior to their engagement by an organisation.

The Prohibited Persons Act commenced on 1 July 2019. It established a working with children check scheme in South Australia. The working with children check scheme strengthens and simplifies the laws for people working or volunteering with children and young people.

Historically the screening and suitability obligations were contained in the same sections of legislation as the child safe environments provisions. From 1 July 2019, the child safe environments provisions and the screening and suitability obligations are in separate pieces of legislation. However, a strong connection between the two Acts remains. Organisations in which staff or volunteers must undergo a working with children check are also required to provide child safe environments.

The Central assessment unit, Department of Human Services, is responsible for the working with children check scheme. For information on the new requirements, (including the range of transitional arrangements which allow people and organisation time to meet the new requirements) visit <https://screening.sa.gov.au/screening-process/child-related-employment-screening/working-with-children-check>.

Applying the Principles of good practice

Child safe organisations require a policy framework that addresses specific requirements outlined in the Safety Act. These include:

- the organisation's commitment to the safety and protection of children and young people
- how volunteers and employees recognise and respond to suspicions a child or young person is at risk
- standards of care for ensuring the safety of children and young people including standards for addressing bullying by children within the organisation
- codes of conduct for employees and volunteers within the organisation
- standards of care for employees and volunteers within the organisation that reflect the organisation's duty of care to children and young people.

The principles set out in this document establish the minimum requirements that organisations must meet in order to demonstrate that appropriate steps have been taken to ensure safe environments for children and young people.

Guidelines and indicators of compliance are set out below each principle to assist organisations to make clear their commitment to ensuring child safe environments. The indicators of compliance provide organisations with clear examples of steps that they can take to ensure that they have complied with their requirements under the legislation. The guidelines and indicators of compliance are not intended to be wholly prescriptive but are to assist organisations in ensuring child safe environments. By providing indicators of compliance, these principles can be used to measure and audit the child-safe practices of organisations. They can also assist organisations in reviewing and evaluating current practice and identifying goals for development. The principles also provide a basis for accountability and challenge if practice falls below the specified standards.⁹

Although no policy or procedure can guarantee child safe environments, by implementing the Principles of good practice, organisations will promote child safety and wellbeing while minimising the risk of harm to children and young people. The principles provide clear guidance on appropriate standards of behaviour for individuals around children and young people and what an organisation can do if it becomes aware of inappropriate behaviour... In addition, by establishing child-safe practices, organisations may deter those who would wish to harm children or young people from joining the organisation.

The aim of the Principles of good practice is to make them relevant and achievable while also recognising that different organisational contexts will, at times, pose challenges.¹⁰ While organisations' child safe environments policies and procedures must meet the minimum requirements of these principles, it is acknowledged that policies and procedures will vary according to the size, nature and resources of each organisation.

⁹ Tearfund & NSPCC (2003), 'Setting the Standard': A common approach to Child Protection for international NGOs, Tearfund & NSPCC, Middlesex, pg 6.

¹⁰ Ibid.

Principle 1: Identify and analyse risk of harm¹¹

The organisation develops and implements a risk management strategy that identifies, assesses and takes steps to minimise the risks of harm to children because of the action or inaction of a person involved with the organisation (such as an employee, volunteer, or another child).

This includes a review of existing child protection policies and practices to determine how child safe and child friendly the organisation is and the development of strategies to minimise and prevent risk of harm to children.

Guidelines

The purpose of the risk management strategy is to ensure the wellbeing of children and young people in contact with organisations, and protect them from harm. In the context of creating safe environments for children, risk management means identifying, assessing and taking steps to minimise the risks of harm to children because of the action or inaction of another person involved with the organisation (such as an employee, volunteer, or another child).¹²

Risk management does not have to be hard or complicated.

In this context, a risk is anything that can cause harm or loss to a child. Risk of harm is the likelihood of inflicting harm on children (either directly or as a consequence of other actions) and the severity of that harm. In the child safe environments context, a child would be considered to be at risk if they are in a situation where there is a high likelihood that the child's safety and/or wellbeing will be severely compromised.

Harm is defined as the detrimental impact on the physical, psychological, emotional or social safety, wellbeing and development of a child as a result of the actions or inactions of another person.

Risk management is identifying and assessing all potential sources of harm, and taking steps to decrease the likelihood that harm will occur.¹³

Seven stages of risk management

1. Establish the goals and objectives (scope and setting) – clarify objectives and areas of operation where risks may occur
2. Identify risks – including how they may happen
3. Analyse risks – determine likelihood and magnitude of consequences
4. Evaluate risks (eg low, medium, high) – which risks are acceptable based on cost-benefit analysis
5. Implement strategies to minimise and prevent risk – actions to be taken and who is responsible
6. Review and revise risks and preventative measures – detect and manage new risks
7. Communicate and consult – to build commitment and increase compliance

(Child Wise (2004), pg. 45. AS/NZS 4360: 2004)

¹¹ Note that reference to the terms 'risk' and 'harm' in this principle are not limited to the definitions outlined in sections 17 and 18 of the Children and Young People (Safety) Act 2017.

¹² Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2007), Creating Safe Environments for Children: Organisations, Employees and Volunteers, pg 3.

¹³ Graff, Linda (2003), Better Safe ... Risk management in Volunteer Programs and Community Service, Linda Graff and Associates Inc, Ontario.

Effective risk management strategies need to be transparent, well understood and diverse, to take account of the increased level of risk associated with the specific nature of some activities and the vulnerability of particular groups.

Risk and safety assessments need to be integrated into practice at every stage of intervention with a child or young person. Risk management strategies will vary in scope and detail depending on the complexity and size of the organisation, the type of activities or services provided for children and the age and maturity of the children and young people involved.

In determining the best way to identify and respond to risk, it is important that employees and volunteers have a basic understanding of child development and the signs that children and young people exhibit when they may be at risk of harm (refer Principle 5). In this way, positive steps can be taken to keep children safe and promote their wellbeing.¹⁴

Principle 1: Indicators of Compliance

These indicators of compliance are not mandatory. They provide clear examples of steps that an organisation can take to meet their obligations to ensure child safe environments under the Safety Act.

- 1.1 Members (including management, employees and volunteers) of the organisation are aware of child development, of how children and young people can be placed at risk of harm within an organisation and how this harm can be detected.
- 1.2 A safety review identifies the organisation's strengths and weaknesses relating to the safety and protection of children.
- 1.3 The key services provided to children by the organisation are identified. An assessment is made of the risk posed to children relating to each of these services.
 - Issues such as sources of, and reasons for, potential risks to children are examined. Potential consequences and existing controls are also identified.
- 1.4 Once high-risk situations have been identified, the organisation develops a risk management process or plan that minimises the risk of such situations or relationships occurring. This includes situations which might lead to false, malicious or mistaken accusations of harm.
 - The organisation may refer to these risky situations in its code of conduct [refer Principle 3]. A code of conduct may explicitly outline how these situations are best avoided or how to minimise their occurrence.
- 1.5 The organisation undertakes regular reviews and responds to new challenges in order to maintain child safe environments.

¹⁴ Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2007).

Principle 2: Develop a clear and accessible child safe policy

The organisation has a child safe environments policy that outlines its commitment to promoting children's wellbeing and safeguarding children from harm.

Guidelines

A child safe environments policy is a statement of intent that demonstrates an organisation's commitment to safeguarding children from harm and makes clear to all within the organisation what is required in relation to the protection and wellbeing of children. It helps to create a safe and positive environment for children to promote children's wellbeing and to show that the organisation is taking its duty of care seriously.¹⁵

Principle 1 outlines how to identify and manage risk. In developing a child safe environments policy and supporting procedures, the risks that have been identified should be specifically addressed in the organisation's policy. In addition, child safe organisations require a policy framework that includes:

- a statement of the organisation's commitment to the safety and wellbeing of children and the protection of children from harm
- how volunteers and employees respond to and report their suspicions a child or young person is at risk of harm
- codes of conduct and standards of care for employees and volunteers within the organisation
- recruitment and training of volunteers and employees
- standards for addressing bullying by children and young people within the organisation
- strategies to promote the participation of children and young people.

Sample Child Safe Policy Statement

(Insert organisation name) is committed to the safety and wellbeing of all children and young people accessing our service. We support the rights of the child and will act without hesitation to ensure a child safe environment is maintained at all times. We also support the rights and wellbeing of our staff and volunteers and encourage their active participation in building and maintaining a secure environment for all participants.

(Child Wise, 2004, pg. 59.)

Everyone, including children, need to know who they can approach to disclose and discuss if they are at risk of harm or need to seek support and advice. A good practice that the organisation may adopt is to appoint an individual (eg Child safety officer) as the first point of contact to provide advice and support to children, parents and employees/volunteers regarding the safety and wellbeing of children when dealing with the organisation.

Policies and procedures require collaborative effort and ongoing review and improvement. Child safe environments policies will only be effective if people are aware of them, have some ownership of them and have the opportunity to express their views on how they are working.

¹⁵ Tearfund & NSPCC (2003), p 1.

Child safe environments policies and procedures should be reviewed regularly. Where an organisation expands the services they offer to children and young people, undergoes a substantial change to the responsible or managing authority or experiences an event or incident where a child or young person was, or could have been, at risk of harm, the policies and procedures should be reviewed and updated as required. Organisations must undertake a review of their child safe environments policies and procedures at least once every 5 years.¹⁶

Copies of an organisation's child safe environments policies and procedures must be provided to people involved with the service, if requested.¹⁷ This includes a child or young person, or parent or caregiver of a child or young person who attends or receives a service from the organisation.

Principle 2: Indicators of Compliance

These indicators of compliance are not mandatory. They provide clear examples of steps that an organisation can take to meet their obligations to ensure child safe environments under the Safety Act.

- 2.1 The organisation has a policy that indicates the organisation's commitment to being a child safe organisation.
- 2.2 The policy is clear, easily understood and is publicised, promoted and distributed widely.
- 2.3 The policy identifies legislative obligations and specifies responsibilities.
- 2.4 The policy is approved and endorsed by the organisation's managing authority.
- 2.5 The policy has supporting procedures and standards.
- 2.6 The policy has been communicated to all relevant people
 - All employees and volunteers are aware of, and have read the policy.
 - Employees and volunteers are encouraged to sign a written statement indicating they have read the policy. The signed acknowledgement should be retained on the individual's personnel file and the organisation should also ensure that a copy is retained by the individual.
 - Parents, carers, children and young people in the organisation are made aware of the policy and are able to access a copy.
- 2.7 The policy is current and has been evaluated and reviewed in accordance with its review date.¹⁸

¹⁶ Section 115(1), Children and Young People (Safety) Act 2017.

¹⁷ Section 114(5), Children and Young People (Safety) Act 2017.

¹⁸ Section 115, Children and Young People (Safety) Act 2017.

Principle 3: Develop codes of conduct for adults and for children and young people

The organisation has a code of conduct that specifies standards of conduct and care when dealing and interacting with children and young people, particularly those in the organisation's care. Where appropriate, the organisation also has a code of conduct to address appropriate behaviour between children and young people.

The code of conduct sets out professional boundaries, ethical behaviour and unacceptable behaviour.

Guidelines

A code of conduct 'is a straightforward guide of dos and don'ts to assist staff and volunteers to conduct their work professionally and effectively'.¹⁹

All organisations that provide services to children and young people should have a code of conduct. A code of conduct requires employers and others specified in the code to adopt the standards of conduct and practices set out in the code. A code of conduct helps prevent abuse of trust where a party is in a position of power or influence over another by virtue of their work or the nature of their activity. Care is always needed when such a relationship potentially exists.

By setting a clear benchmark of acceptable standards of conduct and care, a code of conduct can promote safe, positive and encouraging environments. A code of conduct can minimise opportunities for abuse or harm and help to prevent unfounded allegations. In this way, a code of conduct helps protect children and young people as well as employees and volunteers. This dual purpose is typically made clear in a preamble (for example, the code of conduct could be linked with the organisation's child safe policy, with an opening statement similar to the sample child safe policy statement referred to in Principle 2).

A code of conduct may be independent or written into existing policies or codes of behaviour to provide safeguards and prevent abuse. A code of conduct is a brief, clear document that covers issues such as:

- physical contact
- confidentiality
- toilet and bathing arrangements
- favouritism and 'special' relationships
- training

A code of conduct aims to minimise risk. It should specify appropriate codes of behaviour for employees or volunteers when interacting with children and young people, particularly when employees and volunteers are required to be alone with children and young people

¹⁹ Child Wise (2004), pg 62.

(eg counselling). Wherever possible, organisations should ensure employees and volunteers spend minimal time alone with one child or young person.

High-risk situations or relationships should be specifically addressed in a code of conduct or code of behaviour. Risk minimisation practices such as supervision can support adherence to an organisation's code of conduct.

Examples of high risk situations include forms of sports coaching which may involve non-sexual physical contact, and domiciliary care where toileting and bathing arrangements may need to be performed for children or young people.

In addition, standards of conduct should also be specified for children and young people to outline appropriate behaviour and address bullying.

Bullying is repeated verbal, physical or social behaviour that is harmful and involves the misuse of power by an individual or group towards one or more persons.

Cyber-bullying refers to bullying through information and communication technologies.

It is up to each organisation to develop its own code of conduct to suit individual circumstances and roles based on these Principles of good practice. Certain professions or occupations have developed specific codes of conduct that may also be relevant.

Principle 3: Indicators of Compliance

These indicators of compliance are not mandatory. They provide clear examples of steps that an organisation can take to meet their obligations to ensure child safe environments under the Safety Act.

- 3.1 The organisation has a code of conduct.
- 3.2 The code of conduct includes statements about the responsibility of adults, children and young people to treat one another with dignity, respect, sensitivity and fairness.
- 3.3 The code of conduct clearly sets out acceptable (and unacceptable) behaviour for everyone within the organisation, including but not limited to:
 - existing management, employees, members or volunteers including those who are currently occupying or acting in identified prescribed positions
 - all persons seeking paid employment, membership or voluntary work with the organisation in a position where they perform child-related work, regardless of whether they are existing employees, members or volunteers
 - independent contractors, agency staff, consultants, apprentices, trainees and students on placement
 - children and young people.

- 3.4 The code of conduct identifies and addresses unacceptable behaviours (ie high-risk behaviours), for example:
- unwarranted, unwanted and/or inappropriate touching of a child
 - bullying or harassment of a child
 - inappropriate contact or relationships between employees/volunteers and
 - management of situations where adults are alone with children.
- 3.5 The code of conduct is developed collaboratively and wherever practicable includes input from children and young people.
- 3.6 The code of conduct is widely available, published and communicated to everyone.
- 3.7 The code of conduct requires signed acknowledgement (a statement of commitment) by all employees and volunteers (wherever practicable). By making the acknowledgment and/or signing the code, employees and volunteers confirm their obligation to apply the code to their work within the organisation. The acknowledgment is included on their staff record or personnel file (where applicable).
- 3.8 The code of conduct reflects the unique values and program activities of the organisation
- 3.9 The code of conduct is linked to performance management of employees and volunteers.
- 3.10 The code of conduct states clearly that discriminatory, offensive and violent behaviour is unacceptable and complaints will be responded to appropriately
- Members of the organisation are aware of their duty to raise concerns about the behaviour of employees, managers, volunteers, children and young people or others which may be harmful to children and young people, without prejudice to their own position. This duty exists even if they are not mandated notifiers under the Safety Act.
 - Parents and carers are encouraged to raise any concerns (eg to the Child safety officer) about the behaviour of employees, managers, volunteers, children or others which may be harmful to children, and can expect to be listened to and supported.
- 3.11 The code of conduct is supported by clear organisational reporting and response mechanisms to address breaches of the code of conduct.
- Clear procedures outline what employees/volunteers should do if they are concerned that their actions or words have been misunderstood.
 - Employees and volunteers are aware of existing reporting and disciplinary procedures and how to communicate concerns regarding improper behaviour of volunteers, employees or children and young people within the organisation.
 - The consequences of breaching the code are linked to organisational disciplinary procedures.
 - All procedures are clear, accessible and transparent.

Principle 4: Choose suitable employees and volunteers

The organisation takes all reasonable steps to ensure that it engages the most suitable and appropriate people to work with children and young people.

This is more likely to be achieved using a range of screening measures. Such measures aim to minimise the likelihood of engaging (or retaining) people who are unsuitable to work with children and young people.

Organisations must ensure that where required by the Prohibited Persons Act a working with children check is undertaken for all people working with children or undertaking child-related work prior to engagement by the organisation and then every 5 years. Organisations must ensure that prohibited persons do not work with children. Fines of up to $120,000 can apply where an organisation employs, or continues to employ a prohibited person.

Guidelines

The organisation has a duty of care to take all reasonable steps to protect children and young people from harm. Choosing suitable employees and volunteers is part of fulfilling the duty of an organisation to act diligently and prudently to prevent actions and behaviour that would be harmful to children or young people. It is important that the organisation engages the best possible people to work with children and young people who are suited to the specific role they are undertaking.

People who work with children may be self-employed, employees, volunteers, contractors, subcontractors, carrying out work as a minister of religion, undertaking practical training or performing court ordered community work.

A small number of people who seek to work with children and young people pose a risk of harm to children. It is possible to minimise the risks and to prevent harm by putting safeguards in place. This will deter unsuitable applicants/child abusers from applying and help ensure that they are not recruited into the organisation.²⁰

Background checking, screening and risk assessment during the recruitment of employees and volunteers are important measures within organisations' policies and practices for developing child safe organisations.

The three key terms, background checking, screening and risk-assessment are often used interchangeably but refer to different concepts and processes.

Background checking involves obtaining information about potential employees and volunteers, on the basis that the information is deemed relevant to working in a child-related area.

²⁰ Jackson, Elanor & Wernham, Marie (2005), Child Protection Policies and Procedures Toolkit: How to make a child-safe organisation, ChildHope UK, London.

The information gathered may include details concerning previous employment and relevant experience; verification of qualifications and professional registration; a working with children check; thorough reference checks; and work history reports.²¹

Suitability screening

Screening 'in the context of minimising the risk of harm to children in their dealings with organisations is generally understood to refer to the combined process of background checking, risk assessment and decision-making concerning acceptance/exclusion of persons in areas of child related employment/volunteering'.²² In order to screen and assess employees and volunteers, organisations may:

- undertake face-to-face interviews
- confirm educational status
- request referee reports and obtain reference checks
- require a working with children check²³
- undertake other background checks (eg psychological testing, on the job observation).

In the area of child protection, 'risk assessment' refers to a process of evaluating the information received to reach a decision about the risk of harm a person may pose to children'.²⁴ Some roles present higher levels of risk to children and young people, based on the nature of the work.

Some screening practices may also be used for ongoing monitoring of existing employees and volunteers (eg the continuous monitoring of persons with a working with children check undertaken by the Central assessment unit, Department of Human Services, or on the job observation). Another measure to reduce risk of harm to children and young people is to use probationary periods for new employees and volunteers, to assess their suitability for specific positions, roles or duties.

Face-to-face interviews

Interviews may include behaviour-based questions and open questions that invite explanations rather than a yes or no response (eg why do you want to work with children?).²⁵ It is recommended that one of the interviewers is a Child safety officer (refer Principle 2), someone who has undergone training or is familiar with issues of child protection.

Referee reports and reference checks

Relevant referee reports/references can help identify individuals who may present a risk of harm to children or young people or are unsuitable to work with children and young people. A structured referee check is to be undertaken as part of any selection process for recommended applicants who are not currently employees or volunteers of the ²¹ Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2006), pg 2.

²² Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2007), Guidelines for Information Sharing across Jurisdictions, pg 6.

²³ Some organisations are required by law to require a working with children check is undertaken for people working with children or undertaking child-related work (Child Safety (Prohibited Persons) Act 2016).

²⁴ Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2006), pg 2.

²⁵ Simcock, Anthea, (2000), Safe, not sorry: A handbook for selecting suitable people to work with children, The Institute for Child Protection Studies Inc, Hamilton, pg 13.

organisation. It is recommended that information on the applicant's suitability to work with children and young people is sought from a minimum of two referees. This is in line with international good practice. One referee should be the applicant's current supervisor, unless acceptable reasons are provided for not nominating that person. If the applicant is not working, the applicant's most recent supervisor should be nominated as the referee. If the applicant has never been employed, the applicant may provide the contact details of persons who are able to provide reliable character references.

A suggested question to be asked of referees for the structured referee check regarding working with children is: 'to your knowledge is there any aspect of the applicant's behaviour, actions or activities that would make them unsuitable for working with children or young people?'

In some cases it may be necessary for organisations to undertake follow up with referees in order to establish confidence in the applicant.

Working with children checks

The Prohibited Persons Act outlines the screening obligations for individuals and employers who will work with children or undertake child-related work. The Prohibited Persons Act makes a range of improvements to the screening laws in South Australia, including:

- requiring all people working with children or undertaking child-related work to have a current working with children check which is subject to continuous monitoring
- enabling individuals to apply for a working with children check which remains valid for 5 years and is fully transferable between roles and jobs
- reducing and simplifying the circumstances where a person can be 'excluded' or 'exempted' from undergoing a working with children check
- requiring employers to check a person's screening status is current through an online portal and 'register' each employee to enable the Central assessment unit to notify the employer if an individual's screening status changes
- requiring employers to ensure any person engaged to work or volunteer with children is not a 'prohibited person' (even if they are an 'excluded' or 'exempted' person)
- making it an offence:
 - for an individual who is a 'prohibited person' to work or volunteer with children
 - for employers to engage a 'prohibited person'.

For comprehensive information and resources to assist your organisation to meet the working with children check requirements, please visit the Department of Human Services website, <https://screening.sa.gov.au/screening-process/child-related-employment-screening/working-with-children-check>.

Although the Prohibited Persons Act outlines the minimum screening requirements for people working with children or undertaking child-related work, organisations can request a person undergo a working with children check at any time – regardless of whether there is a legal obligation to do so.

In situations where a working with children check is not required by law and obtaining a check is neither practicable nor proportionate to the resources of an organisation, it is recommended that the organisation requires the applicant/employee/volunteer sign a statutory declaration stating that the individual is not the subject of any charge, allegations or complaints relating to offences against children, and is otherwise not aware of any matters that would render them unsuitable to work with children. While a statutory declaration cannot replace a working with children check, it can go some way towards mitigating risk and may assist in screening as a useful measure of an individual's integrity.

Other background checks

An organisation may decide to undertake other screening measures such as psychological testing and on the job observation.

The screening measures used by an organisation to screen and assess potential and existing employees and volunteers will depend on both:

- the size, nature and resources of the organisation
- the level of risk attributed to the roles [refer Principle 1].

Principle 4: Indicators of Compliance

These indicators of compliance are not mandatory. They provide clear examples of steps that an organisation can take to meet their obligations to ensure child safe environments under the Safety Act and to ensure they meet the working with children check obligations of the Prohibited Persons Act

- 4.1 Working with children checks are conducted for all people engaged to work with children or undertake child related work, unless an exclusion or exemption applies.
- 4.2 The organisation has policies and procedures for recruiting employees/volunteers and for assessing their suitability to work with children and young people.
- 4.3 Screening is undertaken by the organisation prior to the appointment of new employees or volunteers.
- 4.4 All current people who work with children or undertake child-related work have their suitability assessed in accordance with these Principles of good practice.
- 4.5 The organisation has clearly articulated screening and risk assessment procedures that are transparent and available to all relevant audiences.
- 4.6 Risk assessment takes into consideration both situational and individual factors.
- 4.7 Where a working with children check is required by law, the organisation ensures that the check continues to remain current for a maximum validity period of five years.
- 4.8 The rationale for excluding people has been documented and decision-making is evidence-based.
- 4.9 An assessment panel considers applications and decisions are recorded.
 - The panel includes someone who has undergone training/is familiar with issues of child protection
 - When assessing an applicant who is Aboriginal, the panel includes an appropriate Aboriginal person (wherever possible).
- 4.10 The organisation ensures that applicants have an opportunity to have input into the decision-making process (eg provide a right of reply) as well as an opportunity to have the decision independently reviewed (where possible).

Principle 5: Support, train, supervise and enhance performance

The organisation ensures that volunteers and employees who work with children or undertake child-related work have ongoing supervision, support and training such that their performance is developed and enhanced to promote the establishment and maintenance of child safe environments.

Guidelines

The organisation fosters a supportive environment which encourages everyone to work towards continuous improvement and accountability.

To achieve this, the organisation should ensure that there are opportunities for employees and volunteers to develop and maintain the necessary skills and understanding to promote child safe environments. This will ensure that everyone understands the importance of child safety and wellbeing and child protection and will enable employees and volunteers to ensure that the policies and procedures are implemented to a consistently high standard.²⁶

Training and education is important to ensure that everyone in the organisation understands that child safety is everyone's responsibility. Employees and volunteers (in addition to parents/guardians and children) should feel confident and comfortable in discussing child protection issues.²⁷

Organisations could consider requiring relevant staff or volunteers attend the Safe environments: Through their eyes training course. This course provides information on how to recognise, report and respond to children or young people who may be at risk of harm. Visit the Child safe environments website for more information, <https://dhs.sa.gov.au/home>.

Another training option is the SMART Program. The SMART program can enhance the capacity of employees and volunteers to understand child development and effectively respond to the needs of children and young people who have experienced abuse and trauma.

The SMART Program consists of integrated professional development opportunities including a free, interactive online learning package.²⁸

Training and support also promotes an awareness of the appropriate standards of care employees and volunteers must meet to ensure that the organisation discharges its duty of care when providing services to children and young people. Employees and volunteers of an organisation may be supported through the appointment of an individual, for example a Child safety officer (as referred to in Principle 2), who has specified 'child-safe' duties in their job description and can provide a single point of contact for children, young people, parents, employees and volunteers to seek advice and support regarding the safety and wellbeing of children and young people when dealing with the organisation.

²⁶ Jackson & Wernham (2005), pg 55.

²⁷ Ibid.

²⁸ Available at <https://professionals.childhood.org.au/training-development/smart-online-training/>

Effective child safe organisations embed a commitment to child safety within the policy and procedures of their organisation and reinforce this by recognising the good work and practices of employees and volunteers to help keep children and young people safe and protected.

Principle 5: Indicators of Compliance

These indicators of compliance are not mandatory. They provide clear examples of steps that an organisation can take to meet their obligations to ensure child safe environments under the Safety Act.

A pro-active performance development strategy for individual employees and volunteers is developed which focuses on developing skills, knowledge and capabilities of individuals relating to the safety and wellbeing of children (including child development and recognising and responding to suspected children and young people at risk).

- 5.1 Employees or volunteers who work with children or undertake child-related work are involved in regular planning discussions to review previous work and plan for the future.
- 5.2 To promote the safety and wellbeing of children, relevant areas for performance improvement are identified and targeted in action plans to ensure employees and volunteers meet expected performance outcomes.
- 5.3 Performance is measured against standards of conduct and care
- 5.4 Employees and volunteers are aware of the organisation's expectations and appropriate behaviour.
- 5.5 Performance development is an ongoing process.

Principle 6: Empower and promote the participation of children in decision-making and service development

The organisation promotes the involvement and participation of children and young people in ensuring child safe environments.

Guidelines

In ensuring that the best interests of the child or young person remain paramount in the decision-making and practices of the organisation, a child rights-based approach should be used. Such an approach views 'each and every child, without discrimination, as an individual human being, deserving of rights and capable of participating in the process of achieving them in a supportive and adequately resourced environment'.²⁹

The organisation needs to ensure that children and young people know what behaviour is considered appropriate and when and how to speak out if they feel uncomfortable.³⁰ The organisational culture should encourage and empower children and young people to be able to raise and discuss their concerns or issues.

Organisations should also encourage children and young people to participate in decisions that may impact on their involvement and their wellbeing within the organisation. It is important that feedback provided by children and young people is acknowledged and acted upon wherever possible.

Five steps to promoting child safe environments

1. Listen to children
2. Believe children
3. Learn about children and young people being placed at risk of harm and associated protective behaviours which can reduce this risk
4. Teach children about their rights and protective behaviour strategies
5. Instill a culture of safety and awareness.³¹

²⁹Jackson & Wernham (2005), pg 43.

³⁰ Ibid, pg 59.

³¹ Child Wise (2004), pg 41.

Principle 6: Indicators of Compliance

These indicators of compliance are not mandatory. They provide clear examples of steps that an organisation can take to meet their obligations to ensure child safe environments under the Safety Act.

- 6.1 The organisation seeks feedback from children (according to their evolving capabilities) on its services provided for children and its child-safe policies and procedures.
- 6.2 The organisation has reporting mechanisms that allow children to provide comment and feedback.
 - The reporting mechanisms are clearly communicated to children and parents.
- 6.3 The organisation indicates, in a clear and timely manner, how it has incorporated or responded to the feedback provided by children.
- 6.4 The organisation has procedures to inform children and young people of their rights and available complaints procedures.
 - These procedures allow children to safely and confidentially report and provide feedback.
 - Children and parents are aware how they can access help and advice, both within the organisation and beyond, such as the Parent Easy Guides developed by Parenting SA or:

Telephone Services

Kids Help Line	ph.1800 55 1800
Lifeline	ph.131 114
Youth Health Line	ph.1300 13 17 19
Parent Help line:	ph.1300 364 100

Principle 7: Report and respond appropriately to children and young people suspected to be at risk

The organisation ensures that volunteers and employees are able to identify and respond to children at risk.

The organisation makes all employees and volunteers aware of their responsibilities under the Safety Act if they have formed a suspicion on reasonable grounds that a child or young person is at risk.

Guidelines

The suspicion that a child or young person is at risk must be reported to the Child Abuse Report Line (13 14 78). The purpose of imposing a legal obligation on certain people who work with children in our community is simply to protect children from harm. By making it a legal requirement for more people to act as mandatory notifiers, the safety net for children and young people at risk is expanded. Early identification of a child or young person suspected to be at risk can ensure that families are assisted in meeting their responsibility for children's safety. When a family cannot protect its children, the Department for Child Protection has the statutory mandate to assist with the provision of care and protection, or to seek alternative care for children.

Although not a legal requirement, mandated notifiers may undergo training to assist them in recognising and responding to children or young people suspected to be at risk.

South Australia has been offering state wide training of mandated notifiers since 1989. People can undertake the Safe Environments: Through their eyes training to increase their knowledge on how to report and respond to children and young people at risk. There is a seven-hour and refresher program available.

The law imposes liability on mandated notifiers who fail to report a suspicion that a child or young person is at risk. If a mandated notifier fails to notify the Child Abuse Report Line that they suspect that a child or young person is at risk, they may be found to have committed an offence under the Safety Act and may be fined up to $10,000. People without a legislative obligation to report children or young people at risk of harm can still make reports to the Child Abuse Report Line, they are referred to as voluntary notifiers.

The organisation must take proactive steps to ensure that both mandatory and voluntary notifiers know how to report and respond to allegations that a child or young person is at risk. Clear procedures, guidance and training (refer Principle 5) can all help individuals recognise risk and harm. These strategies should also assist with the identification of additional vulnerabilities and barriers to obtaining help that children and young people face because of their race, gender, age, religion, disability, sexual orientation, social background or culture.

Keeping children and young people safe involves more than just reporting concerns to the Department for Child Protection or responding once an allegation that a child or young person is at risk has been made. It also means:

- minimising the possibility of children and young people being at risk
- reducing the impact after a child or young person has been at risk and doing everything possible to ensure it does not occur again
- providing ongoing support and services to children, young people and adults as appropriate.

Therefore, the organisation should also establish procedures that include clear, step-by-step guidance on what to do in different circumstances, including reporting and reacting to witnessed, suspected or alleged behaviour that has placed children and young people at risk or is a breach of the child safe policy. Standard, transparent reporting procedures and response mechanisms clarify roles and responsibilities and lines of communication. They also embody principles of confidentiality and thereby encourage concerns to be raised.

Systems for recording information and for dealing with complaints are also needed, to ensure implementation and compliance. Clear, written guidelines for employees and volunteers when a child or young person makes an allegation can ensure:

- a relationship of trust is established
- the trauma experienced by the child or young person when telling of the risk is minimised
- the incident is reported with the greatest possible factual accuracy
- the child or young person understands that the issue may need to be taken further.

Under the Safety Act, a mandated notifier may not have exhausted their duty of care by reporting that a child or young person is at risk to the Child Abuse Report Line. There may be cases of children or young people suspected to be at risk which identifies a child who has needs that can be addressed by the organisation rather than requiring a more significant response by the Department for Child Protection.

It is the responsibility of the Department for Child Protection to assess the notification and determine whether departmental action is warranted.

In many cases, a multiagency response will be appropriate. Where applicable, organisations are guided by the Information Sharing Guidelines for Promoting the Safety and Wellbeing of Children, Young People and their Families and the Interagency Code of Practice: Investigation of Suspected Child Abuse or Neglect.

Sometimes an individual may suspect a child or young person has been harmed or placed at risk by an employee or volunteer of the organisation. As stated in Principle 3, members of the organisation must be made aware of their duty to raise concerns about the behaviour of employees, managers, volunteers, children or others which may be harmful to children or young people, without prejudice to their own position. This duty exists even if they are not mandated notifiers under the Safety Act.

In many cases when a notifier makes the decision to report suspicion that a child or young person is at risk to the Child Abuse Report Line, neither the organisation nor the child or young person who is the subject of the report will be aware that a notification has been made. However, this does not negate an organisation's obligation to have established practices and procedures that support and assist everyone involved (both adults and children).

The organisation should ensure that all employees and volunteers are aware of the supports available to:

- children and young people
 - both at the time of reporting and after a report has been made
 - in relation to any specific cultural needs
 - during an investigation by the Department for Child Protection or the South Australia Police
 - in providing ongoing services to children.
- the person making the report (the notifier)
 - both at the time of reporting and after a report has been made
 - after a report has been made including seeking feedback from the Department for Child Protection
 - when the organisation provides ongoing services to the child or young person and the family
 - in relation to any secondary or vicarious trauma the person may have suffered (eg through the provision of or referral to counselling services)
 - when notifiers and or the children, young people or adults who are the subject of the notification are members of Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander or culturally and linguistically diverse communities
 - to ensure their safety in their continuing work with families after they have reported a concern to the Child Abuse Report Line.

With such a framework in place, organisations can ensure that immediate and ongoing appropriate action will be taken that reflects the best interests of the child or young person and protects the child or young person from any further harm. In some cases where a concern is raised but there is no suspected risk or harm, the organisation will be required to respond to, and manage the risk itself.

Principle 7: Indicators of Compliance

These indicators of compliance are not mandatory. They provide clear examples of steps that an organisation can take to meet their obligations to ensure child safe environments under the Safety Act.

- 7.1 The organisation ensures that employees and volunteers are made aware of their responsibilities under the Safety Act.
- 7.2 The organisation provides volunteers and employees with adequate information and/or training to assist them to identify children or young people at risk and to report this to the Child Abuse Report Line (13 14 78).
- 7.3 The organisation has clear and unambiguous procedures in place which provide step by step guidance on what action to take if there are concerns about a child or young person's safety or welfare.
- 7.4 The organisation has clear procedures that assist employees and volunteers when responding to children and young people suspected to be at risk
 - There is a process within the organisation for recording incidents, concerns and referrals and storing these securely
 - The organisation has a policy statement that informs employees and volunteers whether or not (and when) it is appropriate to inform the organisation that a report has been made to the Child Abuse Report Line
 - The organisation has clear procedures for dealing with concerns that a child or young person has been placed at risk by a volunteer or employee within the organisation (refer also to Principle 3)
 - The organisation has processes and practices in place to address and respond to children who may be in need.

Glossary of terms

At risk is defined by the Children and Young People (Safety) Act 2017. A child or young person will be taken to be at risk if:

- they have suffered harm (of a kind against which they should have ordinarily been protected)
- there is a likelihood they will suffer harm
- there is a likelihood they will be removed from the state for the purpose:
 - of a medical procedure that would be unlawful in South Australia (including female genital mutilation)
 - taking part in a marriage that would be void or invalid under the Marriage Act 1972
 - taking part in an activity that would be illegal in South Australia
- their parent or guardians are unable or unwilling to care for them, have abandoned them, cannot be found or are dead
- they are of compulsory school age and are persistently absent from school without explanation
- they are homeless or of no fixed address.

Background Checking in the context of working with children 'involves obtaining information about potential employees and volunteers, on the basis that the information is deemed relevant to working in a child-related area. The information gathered may include details concerning previous employment and relevant experience; verification of qualifications and professional registration; working with children check; thorough reference checks; and work history reports'.³²

Bullying is repeated verbal, physical or social behaviour that is harmful and involves the misuse of power by an individual or group towards one or more persons.

Child and child and young person means a person under 18 years of age.

Child-related work is defined by the Child Safety (Prohibited Persons) Act 2016 as including the following services or activities:

- accommodation and residential services for children
- services or activities provided by religious organisations
- childcare or child-minding services
- child protection services
- services or activities provided in the course of the operation of clubs and associations with a significant membership of, or involvement by children, including clubs and associations providing services or activities of a sporting, recreational, cultural or artistic nature
- coaching or tuition services for children
- commercial services provided directly to children
- disability services for children
- education services for children
- health services for children
- justice and detention services for children
- transport services for children

³² Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2006), pg 2.

- the provision of traffic control at, or other supervision of, school pedestrian crossings

Further definition of these services types is provided by the Child Safety (Prohibited Persons) Regulations 2019.

Cyber-bullying uses e-technology as a means of victimising others. It is the use of an internet service or mobile technologies - such as e-mail, chat room, discussion groups, instant messaging, web pages or SMS (text messaging) - with the intention of harming another person. Examples include communications that seek to intimidate, control, manipulate, put down or humiliate the recipient.

Duty of care is a common law concept that refers to the responsibility of employees and volunteers to provide children with an adequate level of protection against harm. It is usually expressed as a duty to take reasonable care to protect children from all reasonably foreseeable risk of harm. The question of what constitutes reasonable care in any given case will be determined objectively by a court and will depend on the individual circumstances of each case. In their relationships with children, employees and volunteers are required to ensure that the physical and emotional welfare of students is safeguarded, and that their own behaviour with children is always regulated by this duty of care.³³

Emotional abuse is a chronic attitude or behaviour directed at a child whereby a child's self-esteem and social competence is undermined or eroded over time or the creation of an emotional environment which is detrimental to or impairs the child's psychological and/or physical development. Behaviours may include devaluing, ignoring, rejecting, corrupting, isolating, terrorising or family violence.

Employer, employee or employment: The Prohibited Persons Act states that a reference to a person being employed will be taken to be a reference to a person who:

- is self-employed; or
- carries out work under a contract of services; or
- carries out work as a minister of religion or as part of the duties of a religious or spiritual vocation; or
- undertakes practical training as part of an educational or vocational course; or
- carries out work as a volunteer; or
- performs unpaid community work in accordance with an order of a court;

and references to an employer, employee or employment are to be construed accordingly.

Government organisation means a government department, agency or instrumentality.

Harm is defined the Safety Act as physical or psychological harm (whether caused by an act or omission), including harm caused by sexual, physical, mental or emotional abuse or neglect.

Merit³⁴ in the context of selection processes is:

- the extent to which each of the applicants has abilities, aptitude, skills, qualifications, knowledge, experience (including community experience) and personal qualities relevant carrying out the duties in question
- if relevant:
 - the manner in which each of the applicants carried out any previous employment or occupational duties or functions

³³ Department for Education, Association of Independent Schools of South Australia & Catholic Education (2005), SA Protection Practices for Staff in their Interactions with Students: Guidelines for Schools, Preschools and Out of School Hours Care, Adelaide.

³⁴ Public Sector Act 2009 (SA).

- the extent to which each of the applicants has potential for development.

Non-government organisation (NGO) means:

- a business; or
- a service provider; or
- a group organised for some purpose, work or undertaking (such as a society, club, institution or body), whether incorporated or unincorporated, and includes a local government organisation but does not include a government organisation.

Organisation means all groups of persons organised for some end or work, whether voluntary or otherwise. This includes: an association whether incorporated or not; a non-profit organisation; a society, club, institution or body. It may also consist of a single person.

Physical abuse is any non-accidental act inflicted upon a child which results in physical injury to the child. Physical abuse results from practices such as:

- hitting, punching, kicking (indicators: marks from belt buckles, irons, fingers, cigarettes)
- shaking (particularly young babies)
- burning, biting, pulling out hair
- alcohol or other drug administration.

Prescribed organisation is defined in the Safety Act as

- state authorities
- persons or bodies who provide a service or undertake an activity that constitutes child-related work under the Prohibited Persons Act
- other persons or bodies declared in the regulations to be prescribed organisations, which include:
 - non-government organisations that provide welfare or cultural services wholly or partly for children³⁵

Prohibited person is defined in the Prohibited Persons Act as a person:

- to whom a prohibition notice has been issued by the central assessment unit (Department of Human Services); or
- who under a law of the Commonwealth or another state or territory, is prohibited from working with children; or
- a person who has been found guilty of a prescribed offence (see Section 5(1), Prohibited Persons Act for the list of prescribed offences).

Risk assessment in the context of child protection 'refers to a process of evaluating the information received to reach a decision about the risk of harm a person may pose to children'.³⁶

Risk management is identifying and assessing all potential sources of harm, and taking steps to decrease the likelihood that harm will occur.

Screening 'in the context of minimising the risk of harm to children in their dealings with organisations is generally understood to refer to the combined process of background checking, risk assessment and decision-making concerning acceptance or exclusion of persons in areas of child related employment/volunteering'.³⁷

³⁵ See regulation 35(2)(a-c), Children and Young People (Safety) Regulations 2017 and section 8C(4)(b) Children's Protection Act 1993.

³⁶ Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2007).

Sexual abuse is any sexual behaviour imposed on a child. The child concerned is considered to be unable to alter and/or understand the perpetrator's behaviour due to his or her early stage of development and/or powerlessness in the situation. Sexual abuse occurs when someone in a position of power to the child uses her/his power to involve the child in sexual activity. Behaviour can include sexual suggestion; exhibitionism, mutual masturbation, oral sex; showing pornographic material eg DVDs, internet; using children in the production of pornographic material; penile or other penetration of the genital or anal region and child prostitution.

State authority is defined in the Safety Act as

- a person who holds an office established by an Act
- a public sector agency
- South Australian Police
- a local council constituted under the Local Government Act 1999
- any incorporated or unincorporated body –
 - established for a public purpose by an Act
 - established for a public purpose under an Act (other than an Act providing for the incorporation of companies or associations, co-operatives, societies or other voluntary organisations)
 - established, or subject to control or direction, by the Governor, a Minister of the Crown or any instrumentality or agency of the Crown or a local council (whether or not established by or under an Act or enactment)
- any other person or body declared by the regulations to be a State authority

but does not include a person or body declared by the regulations to be excluded from the ambit of this definition (for example the Ombudsman).³⁸

A suitability assessment 'may refer to a wide range of factors including attitude to physical discipline and acknowledgement of children's developmental status and needs. A person may be deemed "not suitable" to work with children without automatically implying that the person poses a risk of harm to children'.³⁹

Volunteering means an activity which is of benefit to the community, is done of one's free will and is undertaken without monetary reward.

Work with children A person will be considered to be working with children if they:

- provide a service or undertake an activity that is child-related work in the course of their employment; or
- carry on a business where an employee works with children (whether or not the person themselves works with children).

Working with children check is conducted by the central assessment unit located in the Department of Human Services.

³⁷ Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2007).

³⁸ See Children and Young People (Safety) (Miscellaneous) Variation Regulations 2018.

³⁹ Community and Disability Services Ministers Conference (2007), pg 6.